Defense contractors overcharge Pentagon

WASHINGTON (AP)—Defense contractors have charged the Pentagon millions of dollars for employee cafeterias, executives' haircuts, golf outings, airplane models and other improper items, a House Armed Services Committee preliminary audit said Sunday.

The audit of seven contractors, including General Dynamics Corp. of St. Louis, was prompted by Pentagon auditors' findings that General Dynamics had misbilled the government for items such as country club memberships, cookbooks and boarding an executive's dog at a kennel.

"What we had hoped we were going to find was that General Dynamics was somewhat of an isolated case, that there was no pattern," Rep. Bill Nichols, D-Ala., chairman of the Armed Services Committee's investigations subcommittee, said in an interview. "Clearly, General Dynamics has a lot of company. I'm sorry to say that. I'd hoped that I'd find it might be different."

Nichols and rep. Charles E. Bennett, D-Fla., chairman of the seapower subcommittee, did not identify contractors by name in the interim report of the audit they said would be completed by early next month.

"We are finding millions of dollars of absolutely inexcusable claims filed with the government," Bennett said in a written statement. "We are looking toward legislation that will eliminate the incentives that firms now have to charge the Pentagon for everything, including the kitchen sink."

Among the questionable billings found by auditors so far were:

—A $1.09 million bill for two-year operating losses for an employee cafeteria, despite Defense Department regulations that require contractors to operate cafeterias with the intent of breaking even.

—A bill for $160,000 submitted by one company for taxes paid a foreign government in connection with its commercial business.

—A bill for $10,713 to cover operating losses of an employee barber shop for senior executives.

—A company's bill for $62,071 in public relations costs after the crash of a plane it made.

Concert attracts over 7,000 people

Rain didn't put a damper on the spirits of the crowd, numbering between 7,000 to 10,000, that attended this year's Spring Weekend concert at the Student Union Mall Sunday.

The concert began at noon with the Battle of the Bands winner Grand Central, followed by Mr. Simon Sez, Dr. Jeckyll and Mr. Hyde, Itopia, and ending with the headline act Southside Johnny and the Jukes.

"It ran real smooth," Marshal Senk, concert committee chairman said.

"The rain wasn't much of a deterrent, and most of the people stayed. We are all very pleased."

"This Spring Weekend was one of my best experiences at UConn," Sherri Simon, SUBOG vice president of policy, said. "They people were great and the bands were fantastic."

"Everything went great," said Lou Pellegrino, research and evaluation coordinator for SUBOG said. "The crowd stayed after it started to rain and everything went perfect."

Death camp survivors mark 40th anniversary

DACHAU, West Germany (AP)—Survivors of the Nazis' first concentration camp came to Dachau from 38 countries Sunday to attend services marking the 40th anniversary of the camp's liberation by Allied soldiers.

Memorials were also held in Struthof, France, site of the only World War II death camp on French soil, and in Greece. In Lyon, France, Jews held a vigil outside the prison holding Klaus Barbie, the former Gestapo official charged with deporting French Jews to Nazi death camps.

At Dachau, 12 miles northwest of Munich, 2,000 people attended Jewish, Roman Catholic and Protestant services. Some dressed in the striped garb they wore as prisoners.

Approximately 30,000 people died between 1933 and 1945 at Dachau.

Max Fischer, state secretary of the Bavarian state government, told the gathering that Dachau was "a symbol of the darkest chapter in German history, at which we Germans can only look back with consternation and shame, with horror and deepest regret."

"We cannot undo what was done here," Fischer said. "But we can prevent it from over happening again." Dachau, liberated by U.S. troops on April 29, 1945, is now a museum.

Solving a mystery the old-fashioned way

Playing detective is a part of a newspaperman's job. So I was intrigued when a Chicagoan named Jim walked in off the street with a mystery he wanted solved.

While driving his car that day, he had seen a door of a car ahead of him open slightly, and a black purse fall out. The car kept going, speeding up a ramp leading to an expressway.

Jim stopped and picked up the purse. He opened it and was stunned to find an envelope stuffed with money—singles, fives, tens, twenties and a few hundred-dollar bills. It came to $1,200.

He also found several letters from Poland to a woman at a Chicago address. And, issued to the same woman, was a Polish driver's license.

Her address is on the letters. Why not go there yourself?

"I just did. It's an apartment building, but nobody answered her bell."

Why not turn it over to the police?

"Well, she's from Poland and maybe she's overstayed her visa and is here illegally, so I don't want to bring the police in it. Could you find her?"

Sure. It shouldn't be that hard. If Woodward and Bernstein could make history, I ought to be able to track down one Polish woman. So, that evening, I picked up a friend who reads and speaks Polish and showed him the contents of the purse.

He read the letters from Poland and said: "She has a daughter who is staying with her parents. The daughter says she is getting good grades. Does that help?"

Not unless we're offering a scholarship. Is there anything else?

"Here's some kind of shopping list. Let's see, a fifth of Seagram, a bottle of Smirnov, Gordon's gin, Johnny Walker..."

That list might explain why the purse fell out of the car. Lucky she didn't fall out.

We headed for the woman's address, an apartment building in the part of the city that has become the center of the city's huge Polish immigrant population. Her name was on the doorbell, but there was no answer. So we rang other tenants.

A man on the second floor said we woke him up and should drop dead. A man on the third floor said he didn't know her either, but he said that a column I wrote last week stunk.

We tracked down the landlord.

"She doesn't live here anymore. She really wasn't a tenant before, either. She lived with a girlfriend who was a tenant, but they both moved out."

A further search of the purse turned up a business card for a nearby tavern and another card for a Polish restaurant.

At the restaurant, the pierogis and kielbasa were excellent, but none of the waitresses, cooks or the bartender recognized the picture on the Polish driver's license.

"Why you want her?" a plump waitress asked.

We told her about the contents of the lost purse.

Her eyes gleamed and she said: "You leave purse with me. if she come in, I give her." (Those immigrants learn the American way fast.)

We moved on to the tavern. A guy named Chester said: "She looks familiar. Yeah, I think I remember her. Uh, are you buying a round?"

Obviously, he had watched old detective movies. We bought a round for Chester. And another. Pretty soon everybody in the place said they thought they might know her, so we bought a round for the whole joint.

Finally, Chester said: "Yeah, I remember now. I think she tended bar in a place down the street."

We went in the other bar. A guy named Joe studied the picture. To jog his memory, we bought him a round. Joe's friends looked, too. We bought them a round.

"Yeah, she looks something like my sister, who tends bar for me sometimes," Joe finally said. "But she ain't my sister."

After a few more neighborhood bars failed to turn up leads, we found ourselves in an all-night coffee shop examining the final clue in the purse. It was a couple of tickets for a musical, with a receipt. The receipt from the theater box office was in the name of a man. It was a common name, like Jones or Smith, with an address on Anderson Street. We looked in the phone book. Nobody by that name was at an address on Anderson Street. We called it a night.

The next morning, I phoned Jim, the good Samaritan, and suggested that I give the purse to the cops. Not that they'd have any more success than I did, but at least they'd have the purse if the woman reported it missing.

So, two young detectives—a man and a woman in blue jeans—came by for the purse.

"I think this is a real toughy," I said. "I've run down all the leads. Hoofed all over the Polish neighborhood. Dead ends."

The young cops nodded and said: "We'll do what we can." A half hour later, they called and said: "We found her. She's on her way in."

I went to the police station to meet her. She didn't speak English. Her boyfriend did, but he'd been consuming that shopping list and was a bit blurry. However, he managed to explain that the woman didn't trust banks and the $1,200 was her life's savings. The purse had fallen out of the car because of a faulty door.

I asked the cops how they tracked her down so quickly.

"The receipt for those theater tickets. The address was on Anderson Street, right? Well, there's no Anderson Street in Chicago. So we figured that somebody in the theater office misunderstood the phone order and wrote down Anderson instead of something like Henderson. So we looked for that name on Henderson, and, bingo, there he was in the phone book. He's the woman's boyfriend. They live together. That was it."

CPTV auction raises $408K

HARTFORD (AP)—Connecticut Public Television's "Auction Express" raised a record $408,048 during this year's 10-day event, a station spokesman said Sunday.

Larry B. Rifkin said final figures were compiled after the auction went off the air at 12:30 a.m. Sunday. During the 68 hours the auction was on the air, funds came in the form of confirmed bids, underwriting and cash donations, he said.

"Local businesses donated over 4,000 items and services—vacations, computers, Cabbage Patch Kids, anything you can imagine," Rifkin said.

Funds collected from the auction account for about 10 percent of CPTV's annual operating budget, Rifkin said. Last year, the auction raised a little over $402,000, he said.

Fargo heist clue verified

HARTFORD (AP)—Half of a $10 bill sent in a letter from a Puerto Rican terrorist group a month ago was from a batch of marked bills stolen in the $7 million Wells Fargo robbery, the FBI has confirmed.

In addition, a highway worker in Sturbridge, Mass., recovered three pieces of photo identification belonging to Victor M. Gerena, a former Wells Fargo guard who is the prime suspect in the Sept. 12, 1983 robbery in West Hartford, according to a copyright story in Sunday's editions of The Hartford Courant.

"It's one of the marked bills," said John J. Cloherty Jr., an FBI spokesman in Boston. "We've seen nothing where Gerena has made a statement that he's associated with the group—but they do have the bills."

Confirmation that the serial number on the $10 bill matched that of cash in the robbery was the first official corroboration of claims by Los Macheteros, an extremist group advocating Puerto Rican independence, that they are involved in the Wells Fargo robbery.

FBI agents in Connecticut have refused to confirm that the bill was part of the stolen money.

Development threatens Sound

NEW HAVEN (AP)—The ever-increasing crush of people moving to Long Island Sound's shores spells trouble for the waterway's slow recovery from pollution, said experts attending an annual State of the Sound conference.

Bigger shellfish harvests and new marine life in the Sound show the efforts of more than a decade of pollution control, officials said.

Eighteen million people live within 30 miles of the Sound, and they generate the 1.1 billion gallons of waste spilled into it everyday. The amount swells to 4 billion gallons daily when rain causes storm sewers to overflow and raw sewage is swept into the Sound, said Whitney Tilt, former director of the Long Island Task Force of the Oceanic Society.

Economics summit to open

WASHINGTON (AP)—Leaders of the seven largest industrial democracies meeting in Bonn, West Germany, later this week are looking for ways to keep the world economy growing by soothing tensions over trade, monetary reform and domestic economic policies.

This annual economic summit comes during the third straight year of an economic upturn for each of the participants—the United States, Japan, West Germany, France, Britain, Italy and Canada—but there are concerns about spreading the recovery more evenly and expanding it to developing countries.

The 148-nation International Monetary Fund reported April 17 that, in general, the world economy performed better than expected in 1984, with output growing, inflation declining and poor nations improving their financial positions.

The report said the economic growth in industrial countries was nearly 5 percent in 1984, the best showing since 1976. It said expansion in the industrial countries is expected to slow to an annual rate of 3 percent this year and in 1986, although the pattern of growth likely will be more balanced.

Fed landfills harm water

WASHINGTON (AP)—Federally licensed landfills show extensive failure to comply with groundwater monitoring requirements, the chairman of a House oversight committee said Sunday, citing some data he said was shocking.

Eighteen of 39 landfills that have received waste from clean-ups of abandoned toxic dumps under "Superfund" had been ordered to undertake extensive groundwater monitoring after indications of contamination, said a report by the House Energy and Commerce Committee's oversight subcommittee staff.

The report was released in advance of a hearing Monday on the Environmental Protection Agency's handling of groundwater problems at landfills.

Five killed in gas explosion

BEAUMONT, KY. (AP)—A natural gas line explosion killed five people, gouged a 20-foot-deep crater and flattened six buildings in a tiny community, igniting fires that were visible 20 miles away, authorities said Sunday.

Three people were seriously injured in the blast Saturday night that ripped up a section of Kentucky 90, devastated a mile-square area, and forced the evacuation of about 40 people, according to authorities. The dead included four members of one family.

Dick Brown, a spokesman for the state Department of Disaster and Emergency Services, said two houses, three mobile homes and a saw mill were destroyed in Marrowbone Hill, a settlement about a mile east of Beaumont.

Around the World

Ortega seeks aid from USSR

MOSCOW (AP)—President Daniel Ortega of Nicaragua arrived Sunday in the Soviet Union, the key stop on a nine-nation tour of Communist nations during which he is expected to seek $200 million to supplement Soviet military aid.

The trip comes at a time of fierce debate in the United States about U.S. policy toward Nicaragua.

The Soviet news agency Tass said this weekend that the Reagan administration may be preparing an economic blockade of Nicaragua after Congress rejected its request for $14 million in aid to the Contras, foes of the leftist Sandista Government.

U.S. officials have said the Soviets provided Nicaragua with millions of dollars worth of military aid. Oil industry and diplomatic sources in Central America have said the Soviets supply much of Nicaragua's oil.

But reports indicate the Kremlin has provided little hard cash to help Ortega solve Nicaragua's economic problems, which include a 250 percent annual inflation rate, shrinking production and shortages of food and consumer goods.

25 dead in Beirut battle

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)—Spearheaded by Syrian-supplied armor, waves of Moslem militiamen and their Druse allies routed Christians from coastal strongpoints in south Lebanon on Sunday.

At least 25 people were reported killed and 30 wounded in incomplete police casualty counts from the southern fighting.

In Beirut, Moslem Shiite Amal militiamen backed by Druse said they killed at least 20 Christian fighters in artillery, grenade and machine-gun attacks on the streets of the capital.

Fighting erupted about Saturday midnight, with the Druse thrusting south in one assault while the Popular Liberation Army of leftist and Moslem militias pushed east from the coast.

Officials suggest trip options

BONN, West Germany (AP)—Bavarian Gov. Franz Josef Strauss proposed Sunday that President Reagan lay a wreath at a soldier's monument in Munich instead of making his controversial visit to a German military cemetery at Bitburg.

And Stuttgart Mayor Manfred Rommel, son of World War II Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, said he would understand if West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and Reagan canceled next week's Bitburg visit.

He planned to lay a wreath at the Bitburg cemetery, where thousands of German soldiers from two world wars are buried. Two thousand of the graves contain the bodies of soldiers who fought in the 1944 Battle of the Bulge, the last German offensive of the war, in which 19,000 Americans were killed.

8 arrested on Spring Weekend

By Chuck Lindberg
Staff Writer

Two arrests were made at the Spring Weekend Concert on the Student Union mall yesterday.

Julio Colon, age 29, of 505 Main St. Willimantic, a non-student, was charged at 4:45 p.m. with creating a public distrubance and interfering with a police officer. Colon was involved in a fight and threatened an unidentified female with a knife, police said. He was released on the written promise to appear in court on May 14.

William Scrivini, age 19, of 15 Kent Court Ashford, a student at E.O. Smith High School, Storrs, was charged at 6:20 p.m. with reckless endangerment. Scrivini threw a bottle at firemen who were putting out a bon fire on the Student Union mall, police said. He was also released on the written promise to appear in court.

Six other arrests were made this weekend by UConn Police on Saturday and Sunday.

Ellen Darrow age 40, of Storrs, was charged at 2:32 a.m. Saturday with operating a vehicle while under the influence of alcohol. At 6:31 the same day Shawn Rothwell age 18 of 1015 Whalley Ave. New Haven, was arrested for interferring with a police officer, criminal mischief in the third degree and breach of peace. He was arrested while breaking windows in south campus, police said, and was released on a $5,000 security bond.

Manuel Rodriez, age 19, of 122 Memorial Dr. Willimantic, at 12:02 a.m. on Sunday, was arrested for a breach of peace and interfering with an officer. Police said Rodriez spat on a female student after he had been asked to leave a dormitory. He also resisted the officers as they were arresting him. Involved in the same incident was Charles Kanner age 19 of 99 Memorial Dr. Willimantic, who was also charged with interfering with a police officer.

Quinn Ramsby, age 34, of 31 Wakefield Rd. Branford, was charged with driving while intoxicated, which resulted in a collision in W lot in which no one was injured. He was released on a written promise to appear in court.

Poll shows conclusions differ on Vietnam War

STORRS (AP)—Ten years after the fall of Saigon, memories of the Vietnam War are fresh among many Connecticut residents, but opinions and conclusions about the war seem as divided as ever, according to a poll conducted by the University of Connecticut.

The pollsters interviewed 500 Connecticut adults, selected at random, between April 16 and April 24 and found disagreement over the "lessons" which can be learned from the war. The margin of error in the poll, conducted for The Hartford Courant, was plus or minus five percentage points.

Two thirds of those questioned said "the United States should stay out of guerilla conflicts." But an almost identical percentage said "it is better to back a government that may not meet our ideals of democracy than it is to allow a communist takeover."

State residents polled agreed on at least one thing. By a 79 percent to 13 percent margin, those polled said that "we should never begin a military effort we do not plan on going all out to win."

"What all this means," said G. Donald Ferree Jr., who directs the poll for the university's Institute for Social Inquiry, "is that the public simply does not find any simple lesson from Vietnam, at the same time there is widespread dissatisfaction with what ultimately happened there."

"Our policy was not hawkish enough for the hawks and not dovish enough for the doves," he said. "The one clear consensus is that that sort of middle road must be avoided in the future."

Connecticut adults in the poll were found to be generally bitter about the war in Vietnam. Two thirds said the war "was a bad idea from the start." One quarter said it was "a good idea that went wrong."

Men polled were 10 percent more likely than women polled to believe Vietnam was a good idea gone wrong. The Republicans polled were twice as likely as independent and Democrats polled to say the war was a well-intentioned effort gone sour.

Connecticut adults in the poll clearly do not believe the United States lost the war in Vietnam. Rather, they said the country just didn't fight hard enough to win. Fewer than 1 in 5 of those polled said the North Vietnamese beat the United States, but 6 in 10 said the United States "decided the war was not worth the cost and got out."

Two-thirds of Connecticut residents polled either served in Vietnam or know someone who did. The results also show that a vast majority of residents polled believe Vietnam veterans should receive the respect given to those who fought in World War II, but are not.

—$523.39 for "entertainment expenses for the representatives of the government of Sweden."

—A $12,333 bill for season tickets to the Los Angeles Forum. The company, with 15,000 employees, said the billing was useful for employee morale. It was for two seats.

—A 1981 bill for $959.30, made out to a golf club, for one "golf outing."

Other questionable billings, Nichols said, included expenses related to the Paris Air Show, expenses ruled ineligible long ago by the Defense Department. In all, he said, the preliminary findings indicate as much as $1 of every $33 submitted to the government for overhead expenses may be questionable.

Nichols said the disclosures of waste and improper billings by contractors likely will hurt him and other supporters of the military in their efforts to get Congress to continue to support a defense buildup.

"We get jumped on not only the floor, but back home. 'Why do you need more money? They're not spending what you gave them wisely.' How do I answer that?" Nichols said. "What we have found in the initial finding has been extremely depressing to me. We didn't find what I hoped to find. We found rather the same across-the-board pattern for this kind of thing in all seven contractors we checked."

Nichols said the findings indicate that critics of defense spending who said the Reagan administration's buildup was too fast may have been right.

"That very clearly could be a legitimate statement," he said. "Defense programs are being created as sort of a welfare agency by some of our defense contractors. We've got to stop that. The public is demanding it."

Nichols said among the changes he wants considered is to give Defense Department field auditors greater authority to reject inappropriate billings, without giving companies an easy way to appeal.

Now, Nichols said, the appeal procedure is so easy that most questionable claims are settled by "horsetrading."

"They do just like we do when we get in an argument with the Senate. They split the difference, shake hands and go and settle," he said. "I'm not happy with that. I think that leads to a lot of avenues that are open to question in my mind."

In addition to General Dynamics, the companies being audited by the committee's team of auditors from the General Accounting Office and the Defense Contract Audit Agency include Sperry Corp., New York; Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Co., Newport News, Va.; Bell Helicopter, Ft. Worth, Texas; McDonnell Douglas Corp., St. Louis, Mo.; Rockwell International Corp., Pittsburgh, and the Boeing Co., Seattle.

should avoid sending American troops into combat situations for fear of another Vietnam, or should we be willing to use force to defend our interests around the world," half of those polled argued against committing troops. Three in ten polled said the United States should be willing to use force.

Men polled were evenly divided on whether to use troops to defend national interests. Women polled, by a margin of more than 2-to-1, placed greater emphasis on avoiding a military conflict like Vietnam than on protecting U.S. interests.

Nutmeggers plan 350th birthday festivities

HARTFORD (AP)—Connecticut begins celebrating its tricentquinquagenary this week, a "project most of us would rather praise and participate in than pronounce," says state Economic Development Commissioner John J. Carson.

Rather than bother with the tongue-twisting terminology for "350th birthday," state officials have planned a roster of events in plain language for a year-long celebration commemorating the first meeting of the General Court in 1636.

The General Court—a group from the state's earliest three towns of Wethersfield, Windsor and Hartford—was the forerunner of the state legislature and adopted the country's first written constitution.

Connecticut Celebration 350 Inc., a non-profit organization state officials established to promote fun for a year, is kicking off the festivities Wednesday. Officials from each of the state's 169 towns will send up 350 blue, green, pink and red balloons.

Besides the more than 50,000 balloons sailing through the air at noon, bells will be rung in the communities, special flags flown and various ceremonies held.

In West Hartford, residents are baking up a batch of Joe Frogger cookies to give people a taste of a 100-year-old New England recipe. The cookies—with plenty of rum and dark molasses—were created by a black man, known as Uncle Joe, who lived near a frog pond in Marblehead, Mass.

Gov. William A. O'Neill, whose wife Nikki O'Neill is co-chairwoman of the anniversary committee, has designated May 1 through April 26, 1986, as the celebration period. April 26, 1636, was the first session of the General Court.

"Indeed, the General Court laid the foundation for all the progress and prosperity of which we as citizens of Connecticut are both guardians and heirs," the governor said in his declaration.

The state's congressional delegation is also supporting a bill in the U.S. House of Representatives to honor the state that was named after the Quinnehtukqut, an Indian name for the Connecticut River.

Commemorative medals are being struck by the Medallic Art Co. of Danbury, which produced medals for the national Bicentennial in 1976.

Barnett Laschever, tourism director for the Department of Economic Development, said the state has planned "a three-tiered celebration."

First, word was sent to all state agencies to incorporate the Celebration 350 theme into whatever they do. The anniversary logo, showing balloons of many colors bubbling skyward out of an outline of the state, will be displayed on all state vehicles.

A second round of events will arise from Connecticut's 169 municipalities. Laschever said a consultant the state has hired, Events Management Associates, already has obtained commitments from 140 towns to coordinate such things as festivals, concerts and footraces with the state observance.

"It should be good," he said. "It's almost double the participation we had for the 1976 Bicentennial."

The final category includes parades, festivals, concerts and special events stemming from Celebration 350 itself.

The celebration committee wants to take in all cultures, ages, social classes and ethnic groups in its festivities that will start almost a year ahead of the actual 350th anniversary date.

For instance, a road race is planned in East Haven by the New Haven Gaelic Football and Hurling Club May 5, and an Indian festival is planned in Meadows State Park in Haddam in late August.

Beard-growing contests are planned in Bristol, East Haven and Bloomfield. A clambake is planned in Old Saybrook in August and a festival in Middlebury June 1 will showcase Connecticut wine.

"The idea of the celebration is to create legacies," said Jill McGuire, a spokeswoman for the organizing group. She said plans are to have many of the events—such as the Indian and wine festivals—become annual.

"The list...will grow in the months ahead," said Carson, who also is a member of the celebration committee.

"The purpose, of course, is more than a good time," Carson said.

Man poses as South African

HARTFORD (AP)—A 22-year-old New London man who spent a month in South Africa posing as a black says his trip through the racially divided country afforded him "only a glimpse" of the oppressions of apartheid.

But Peter Anderson, a green-eyed sandy haired exchange student studying in London, said his month-long journey was enough to show him a world that he described as "grotesque in its disparity."

In February, Anderson read John H. Griffin's 1961 book "Black Like Me," an account of posing as a black in the American South which put a dent in the country's consciousness two decades ago. But unlike Griffin, Anderson did not undergo medical treatment to change his skin color.

Instead, he relied upon black pancake makeup from a theatrical supply store. He also used a wig, mascara, lip coloring and a pencil to darken his eyebrows.

Anderson described his adventure during a telephone conversation with the Hartford Courant from London on Saturday: He arrived in Johannesbury March 29 and spent his first week as a white, researching the laws and attitudes in the city.

"I wanted to get a sense of the environment," he said. On April 5, he shed the trappings of a privileged white American and donned his costume before registering in a guest house on the outskirts of Johannesburg.

"That night I was concerned with whether my disguise would work," he recalled. "So I went down to the lobby and talked to some black women who were working there. They didn't believe that I was white until I took off my wig. That gave me confidence."

Any doubt that his disguise was not convincing vanished the next day, when Anderson tried to board a train to Pretoria.

"I went to a platform and tried to buy a ticket," he said. "A woman started yelling at me in Afrikaans."

An English-speaking ticket seller explained to Anderson that not only was he on the wrong platform, but that he also was at the wrong station.

"There are two separate train stations—one for blacks and one for whites," Anderson said. "I was astonished."

"The train was packed. And I really got a feeling of how depressing it all is. I saw the sad, tired faces, heard the babies crying and smelled the sweat."

He said the city of Pretoria was equally depressing.

"There is a section of the city where the blacks enter to go to work. There was litter everywhere and while the whites rode around this beautiful city in their cars, the blacks had to ride in these old rusted buses.

"I could feel the pain that must go through their heads—taking these buses from their shanties into this beautifful city."

One day, he removed his makeup and took a guided tour through Soweto, the site of several protests and uprisings. The guide, he said, told the white tourists how much the government had done for the blacks. Anderson noticed the similarity of all the matchbox-like houses.

"It showed me the anonymity the blacks must face. Here are 200,000 houses that all look the same."

Litter was everywhere, barbed wire was woven around the tops of schoolyard fences and security police officers were omnipresent. The tour guide called them "mediators of tribal problems," Anderson said.

He had lost his train ticket, he recalled, and was looking through his books and baggage when the ticket seller called a police officer over. The officer began searching through Anderson's camera bag and discovered his U.S. passport and school identification card, both with pictures.

In Cape Town, Anderson was barred from two restaurants and a hotel while he was wearing his disguise. He said he managed to find a hotel run by a Frenchman who was willing to break the law by allowing him to have a room for a night.

He was allowed into an all-white theater, but only after he explained he was an American black.

The officials demanded to know what a black man was doing with a white man's identification and were dissatisfied with Anderson's explanation. He was taken to police headquarters and "vigorously" interrogated for two hours, he said.

"It was terrifying. They wouldn't let me call the U.S. consulate. I felt so helpless."

He said the police forced him to remove everything from his luggage and lay it out on the floor. They took pictures of him with and without his makeup, confiscated his camera and several notes and photocopied all the pages of a journal he had been keeping.

They also photocopied portions of the book "Black Like Me," which Anderson had taken with him on the trip.

"They asked me why I was writing lies about South Africa and at one point one of them took a swing at me," Anderson said.

He said he spent the night with a member of the security police and the next day was allowed to leave after signing a paper absolving the South African government of any wrongdoing.

"I guess I could have refused to sign it, but I was tired and scared and I didn't know if they'd keep me there even longer. I just wanted to get out."

Anderson said he plans to write a book on his experience.

Trivial matters

Although it may not be the "in" thing to do, we'd like to pay the often-underrated UConn Public Safety Division (police) a compliment. We're not saying they're perfect, but in this case at least one officer exhibited sensitivity that would be considered "above the call of duty" because it involves a fairly trivial issue—a parking ticket.

The case involves a student, who we'll call Fred, the ticket and Sunday night's desk officer.

It seems that while working on a term paper, Fred remembered he had to pick up a newspaper and a copy of Newsweek in his North Campus dorm room. Since he was on the other side of campus, Fred decided to drive back.

Upon arriving at the Jungle, Fred parked in a 15-minute zone along the east side of the dorms. He left the car, went into his room, picked up the paper and said goodnight to his roommate. Approximately four minutes after he'd left the car he was on his way back.

Surprise! Somehow, in four short minutes, UConn officer No. 546 had ticketed Fred's car. On the ticket was the violation—written out—"over 15 min. time limit."

Clearly there was a problem. Either the officer has a severe problem with his pocket watch or he was lying through his pen as he was writing out the ticket. If he had only leaned on the car while writing the violation, he'd have noticed the engine was still warm.

But checking for things like that must be too much trouble for someone writing a ticket at one in the morning. After all, who does he have to answer to for his blatent inconsideration? No one, since ticket appeals go to the student appeals board.

Fred was now visibly upset. This was not the first time he'd been unjustly ticketed, nor the first time he'd been falsely accused of violating the 15-minute limit here, at his dorm. It was just the most ridiculous example.

So he decided to find out who officer No. 546 is. Leaving North Campus, he drove to the police station.

That's the whole story and, like we said, it's a pretty trivial matter. It's especially trivial on this particular Sunday—Fred had figured the last thing the police would want to hear about, in the wake of a rowdy Spring Weekend, was a parking ticket.

So we thank that officer, whoever he is. But we also chastize No. 546 for such disregard for student's interests. Maybe the desk officer will give him some lessons. After all, if there weren't any students at UConn, he wouldn't have a job.

Quotables

"I'm gonna throw both barrels at them tomorrow night. They want me, they're gonna get me. They don't want me. They don't want no part of me. It shows you they don't know much about basketball."

—Boston Celtic forward Larry Bird, responding to Cleveland fans chant of "We want Bird" as the Caveliers beat the Celtics Tuesday night when Bird was sidelined with an injury. The next night Bird, playing with an elbow brace, scored 34 points to lead the Celts over Cleveland and advance to the next round of the NBA playoffs.

"I am grateful to the President of the United States for this noble gesture. I find it most regrettable that this great man, who is a friend of the Germans, has encountered considerable domestic difficulties because of this envisaged noble gesture."

Salvation for a chocoholic: diet chocolate fudge soda

As I've told you nice people before, two years ago I went on a diet during which I lost 22 pounds. In the ensuing time I've managed to keep most of the weight off—but, as those of you who have made similar efforts are well aware, that's not always the easiest thing in the world to do.

One of the biggest problems is chocolate. Any sane person loves chocolate, and I have always been addicted to it. If you eat chocolate, though, you're going to end up adding back all the pounds you lost—and although diet food is available in many flavors, chocolate is one that you won't find in many lean-cuisine departments.

But I have found a miracle. I will share it with you. It is called Canfield's Diet Chocolate Fudge Soda.

It's like soda pop. There are only two calories per can. To say it tastes like chocolate is to insult it. Let me put it this way: Taking a sip of the stuff is like biting into a hot fudge sundae. I'm serious. It's not like drinking pop. It's like eating hot fudge—only the fudge isn't hot, it's a cold drink.

Usually, just popping open a can and taking a gulp of the stuff is enough to satisfy my craving for chocolate. If I feel hungry and my mind is envisioning chocolate cake, I'll swallow some of the pop and I'll be OK.

But when things get really desperate—when I can almost feel myself reaching into the icebox for a piece of cake, or ripping open a package of cookies—I have developed a special routine.

I will take the piece of cake or the cookies, and I will place it on a plate. Then I will stare at the plate for 30 or 40 seconds. I will get to the point at which I am almost lunging at the cake or the cookies.

Then—and only then—I will grab a can of Canfield's Diet Chocolate Fudge Soda, I will pop open the top, and I will take a swig... while still looking at the cake or the cookies. The result will be that I feel exactly as it I have actually eaten the cake or the cookies. Really.

Now, this soda pop is so rich and chocolately that I have never been able to finish an entire can. A couple of swallows does it for me. If I am able to keep this weight off over time, a large part of the credit will go to this soda.

The other day, after staring at a piece of cake and swallowing the diet fudge soda, I called the Canfied's beverage company and asked if I might talk to the man who had invented the drink. I was connected with one Manny Wesber, who identified himself as Canfield's chief chemist.

"I remember exactly when we started working on the Diet Chocolate Fudge Soda," said Wesber, 64. "It was back in 1971. Alan handed me a pound of chocolate fudge. He said, 'I want you to try to duplicate this taste—but in a diet drink.'"

Wesber, working in his white lab coat, toiled for six months trying to accomplish the task. "We went through literally dozens of formulations, trying to make it work," he said. "It would have been easy if we would have been able to use chocolate—but as soon as you use real chocolate, you're talking about a lot of calories."

The final version was made up entirely of artificial ingredients. "The drink has absolutely no chocolate in it," he said. "Not one bit of cocoa at all." What Wesber and his staff did was to combine the proper combination of chemicals to precisely duplicate the taste of chocolate fudge—without the use of chocolate.

"What I kept in the back of my mind was a Hershey bar," Wesber said. "I thought that if the final product tasted just like a Hershey bar then I had succeeded. And that's how it came out."

Wesber does not display false modesty when talking about this particular drink:

"I always knew I could do it," he said. "It was just a matter of being given the time to get it right. I think that the real reason for its success is that everyone loves chocolate, and when you go on a diet one of the first things you really miss is the taste of chocolate. At one time we tried to make a regular version of the drink—a non-diet version. And it didn't sell. People wanted to buy the artificial version—what made it attractive is that you could drink it while you were dieting and still feel like you were getting some chocolate in your system."

Wesber said that his modesty visceral gratification usually comes from watching people's faces when they take a sip of a drink he has formulated: "I look for a smile or a frown, and when they smile that makes me feel good."

In the case of the Diet Chocolate Fudge Soda, though, he said that his greatest thrill came in a bank. He was cashing his Canfield paycheck, and the clerk looked at the check and said, "That's the company that makes the diet fudge drink."

Wesber looked at her and said, "Yes, I'm the person who put it together."

The clerk said, "What do you mean?"

Wesber said, "That drink is my baby. I invented it."

And—he swears this is true—the clerk started screaming as if the Beatles had just walked into the bank.

"She was yelling so loud that you could hear her all over the bank building," Wesber said. "That's the day I knew that this drink really was doing its job."

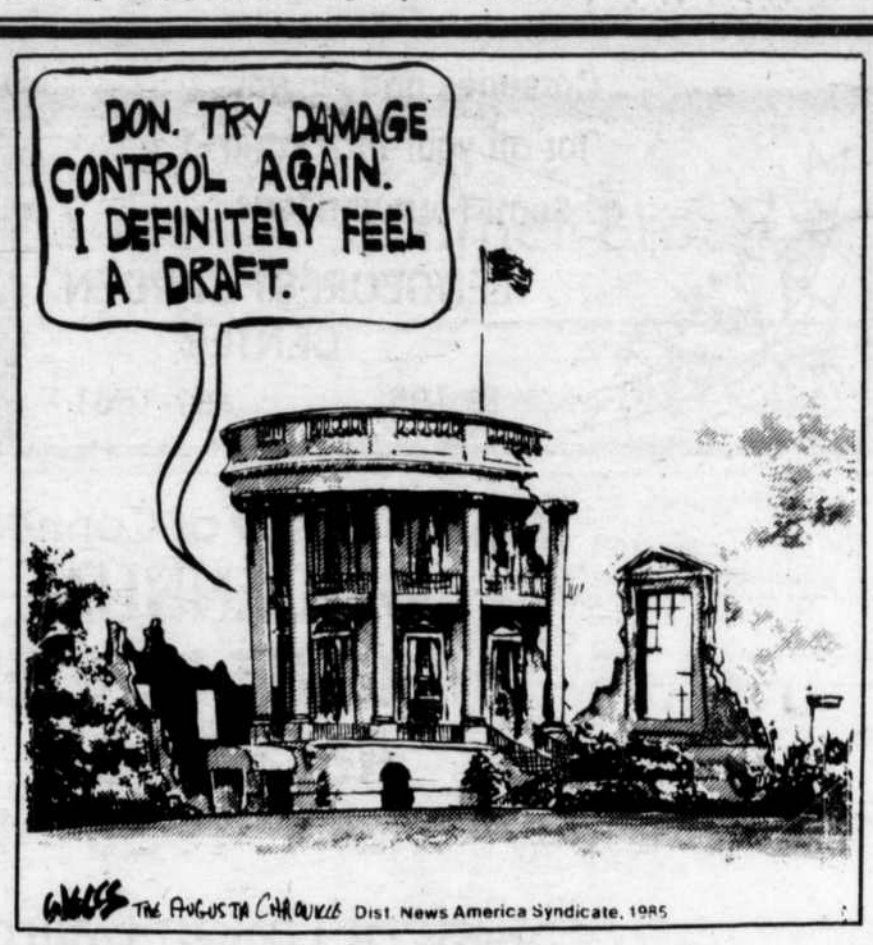
Support the African club

To the Editor:

It was a pleasure to see the coverage extended by your paper to the recent campus visit of a representative from the United Nations' observer Mission of the African National Congress of South Africa. It was a very successful, well-attended forum that featured participation by people of all colors.

The event was organized by the African Club under the sponsorship of both the Afro-American Cultural Center and the Puerto Rican Center.

The African club is currently involved in activities that concern the twin issues of apartheid and famine relief in Africa. Last year, about $400.00 was donated to CARE by UConn's African students for the relief of hunger and famine in Africa's Sahel region. Most of that money came from the proceeds of a dinner organized by the students and patronized by the Storrs community.



African nations and artistes are also making contributions to these relief efforts: musicians such as manu Dibango of Cameroon and Sunny Ade of Nigeria, along with several others from Ghana and Zaire, got together in Paris to record Tam Tam pour L'Africaine, the proceeds of which are going for famine relief, just like We Are The World's sales. So far, 100,000 copies have sold in France and shipments of the record should soon be in Africa.

The African Club wishes to express its appreciation to all those who give of their time and money to these worthy causes. We also urge those standing by the sidelines not to delay any further in throwing in their support.

Mrs. Omaa Chukwurah
Secretary, African Club

Hillel says 'Thanks'

To the Editor:

As Director of the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation at the University of Connecticut, I would like to take this opportunity, as we enter the final week of the spring semester, to thank all of our friends and supporters on the Storrs campus for participating in our activites and programs, for coming home to Hillel house during our "welcome home to Hillel" campaign, and for giving of themselves to make this, for all of us at Hillel, a very active, productive and successful semester. Good activites and good will have brought our circle of friends together this semester, and the bonds that we have established these past few months will continue to grow over time. The more we do, the more we will be able to do together, and we will build toward a promising future every time we come together, as friends, for food and enlightenment, and for fun.

To those of you on the Storrs campus who have not yet found your way, this semester, through our open doors, and to those of you who have, come on down to Hillel House, 54 North Eagleville Road, this Tuesday evening, April 30, beginning at 7:00 p.m. for our final program of the spring semester—an "Open House." Dr. Reuben Baron, a Professor in the Psychology Department, will join us for an informal discussion on the quality of undergraduate college life on the Storrs campus, and we, at Hillel, need your ideas and suggestions so that, as the semester ends and as a new academic year approaches, we will be able to use our resources wisely and well to enhance the quality of college life on the Storrs campus, and to enhance each other's lives as we come together for activities and programs.

Personals

To the person who took the postcard off my door in Watson: (the guy with the orange Mohawk, remember?) If you come back, I'll give you the rest of my letter from my best friend, my mother, my grandparents (you seem to be so interested in those things that mean the most to me) - Anyway, thanks alot - Maybe when your best friend goes to London, you'll give me your first post card - And maybe, just maybe, you friends will see this and know what an unmentionable slime you are. I sure hope you enjoy it as much as I did.

Dear Erin, Susan, Crispy, Chris, C-Lou, and JJ, of course I missed blue personals (what did you expect?) But this you can keep even if it's black. I'm going to miss you all too much (Need my friends, you know) This should also be to our love Gail, the sweetest girl this side of the Mississippi. But I still have a good roommate; even though I complain, I'm going to miss you. Anyway, it's been a good time - with the slave decks, John, Mr. Spring-stine, Drew, Mark, Jonathan, and the freshman mainliner. You know, I never wrote a senior quote - do you think NCHS would accept this? Love, Al

KURT AND MICHELLE, Thanx for making this semester bearable. I hope to see you on the vineyard - or - "I'll meet you at the jubilee." Clare

To Adam, Happy 21 st, Honey. You really are OLD now! I hope this Birthday is better than last. I'll watch my step around sidewalks Today. Love you, the Heidster P.S. Good Luck on your exams

LET'S GO SALUD Belden 5th LET'S GO YA know what's Really Annoying? LET'S GO LET'S GO NIGHTMARES!!! LET'S GO LET'S GO LET'S GO!!!

To the girl in Geology 101: If you had switched to the front section sooner I would have gone to class more often. Good Luck on the final. The guy in the green sweatshirt.

Chip, Best of days ahead to you. You're a sweetheart and should consider the field of "Big Brothership" if all else fails - Enjoy! (KJ's?) Ciao!

Brian in Sprague, to a nice guy and great dancer. "Let's go Crazy" - get the "message". Had fun. Thanks. From the Engaged One!! (Hanks)

Brian: "Love consists in this, that two solitudes protect and touch and greet each other" Happy Second Anniversary! Love, Gretchen

Hey Tom M. of Batterson D, You ought to write a book, "How to make 66 enemies in one day!"

SHEILA!!!**
(Hanks B) There are two reason s why you should have a Heppy Birthday... Love Deana and Joanne

Maria - Thanx for giving me two Great years ... SCREAMERS, sharp dressed man, changing outfits, "the" cemetary, NYC, footloose, setting "goals", dreaming about the future.. LOVE Spently

DC5 - We owe you one so here it is. Congratulations, you finally made it! So have fun in Delta Chi. We were behind yu all the way and we're glad you stuck with it. Good luck on your fourth set of finals. Love Karen and Jen

To my sweetheart who took me for a walk to the lake Sunday night, thanks for being romantic. How's that for a personal? Deb

FRAN, Seven months is only a beginning. Just Remember you have a "Little One" "East of Omaha". I LOVE YOU ALOT SKANNEE! Love, Dana

JEFF (The indoor soccer player) Sorry to see VILLANOVA lost. Hope you had a great Spring Weekend! See ya 'round! -Kelly

Melissa
Happy Birthday!! I
I Love Yo
Michael

IN SHIPPEE NEXT YEAR? Good Choice - Great Opportunites await you! Sign up for C-Section waiting list this week at Shippee Switchboard. Then get psyched for a great year!

Wednesday night at home to Boston.

The speculation intensified prior to Thursday night's game against Boston, when it was rumored that Berra would be fired if the club did not win. The Yankees beat Boston 5-1 Thursday night.

Martin had been working as a scout for the Yankees before he was named Manager Sunday.

Martin has already managed 728 games for Steinbrenner, the most-ever during the owner's tenure. Sunday's game was Berra's 178th under Steinbrenner.

Doubles team wins

BABSON PARK, MA— UConn freshman Steve Ehrenpreis and junior Eric Uthgennant combined to win the New England "C-flight" doubles tennis championship Sunday, defeating Richard Green and David Redford of the University of Vermont, 6-4, 6-7, 6-4.

Eherenpreis of Cromwell, CT and Uthgennant of Ellington, CT, lead UConn to a tie for sixth place at the three-day event. Vermont captured the team crown with 33 points followed by Hartford (28), MIT and Brandeis (27), Central Connecticut (21.5), Babson (18.5), and UConn, Clark and Rhode Island College, all with 14 points.

Men's track team takes third

NEW HAVEN, CT—Four UConn trackmen recorded first place finishes to lead Connecticut to a third-place team finish at the 1985 Connecticut Intercollegiate Outdoor Track and Field Championships held at Yale University Sunday afternoon.

With the aid of eight first place victories, Yale University claimed first place honors (212.5 points) in the one-day competition. Southern Connecticut (172) and Connecticut (131.5) rounded out the top three team finishers.

Connecticut winners included senior Robin Petgrave, 110 meter hurdles, with a time of 0:14.70; senior co-captain Mike Gagne, victor in the 1500 meter run with a 3:52.48 clocking; junior Mario Marrero, who took first place honors in the shot put (49'9"); and freshman Tim Borbitt, who claimed the best finish in the high jump with a leap of 6'9".

Connecticut returns to action this Saturday and Sunday, May 4-5, at the 1985 Big East Conference Outdoor Championships which will be held at Villanova.

Mets win marathon

NEW YORK (AP)—Mookie Wilson scored the winning run in the 18th inning on a fielding error by first basemen Jason Thompson and the New York Mets defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-4 in a game that lasted nearly 5 1/2 hours.

Gary Carter started the winning rally with a walk from Lee Tunnell, 0-2, the Pirates' seventh pitcher. Darryl Strawberry, who had hit a grand slam in the first, singled as Wilson, running for Carter, went to third. Clint Hurdle then hit a ground ball that went through Thompson's legs to score Wilson.

Tom Gorman, 2-1, the sixth Mets pitcher, worked seven innings of relief for the victory.

The Pirates loaded the bases with none out in the ninth and couldn't score, and the Mets loaded the bases in the 12th but failed to get a run across.

After Strawberry's homer—his first career grand slam—the Mets went without a hit until Rafael Santana singled to lead off the 12th.

Huskies start swimmingly, end as beached whale

By Dana Gauruder
Sports Editor

JAMAICA, N.Y.—Sunday started out as a day at the beach for head UConn baseball coach Andy Baylock.

His team had played well the previous afternoon, and had a chance to establish a comfortable lead in the Northern Division of the Big East. The sun was shining brightly as his best pitcher, freshman John Shea, took the mound and set down St. John's with ease in the first inning.

But just when Baylock thought it was safe to go back in the water, the Huskies were blown out of the water.

Aided by three UConn errors, St. John's scored eight runs in the third inning and buried the Huskies, 12-3. The victory put the Redmen just a half-game behind UConn in their division of the conference.

"There's no consistency with this group," Baylock said of his team, whose record sank to 10-5 in the conference and 16-19-1 overall.

The victory was the second by the Redmen in a three-game weekend series with the Huskies. UConn won the first game of a doubleheader Saturday, 5-1, and lost 4-2 in the second contest.

Being the champion of the division is important to both teams since the second-place finisher will face Seton Hall in the opening round of the Big East Tournament. Seton Hall, which has won the Southern Division of the conference, is far superior to any team in its division. UConn plays three games at Boston College next weekend while St. John's will play three games at Providence to determine the Northern Division champion.

"No one wants to play Seton Hall," Baylock said.

Yet the Huskies moved closer to playing the Pirates by taking a step backward Sunday. "They (the Huskies) have got to play next week," Redmen head coach Joe Russo said. "They can't afford to let down."

Both Baylock and Russo expected a pitcher's duel between Shea and St. John's starter Wayne Rosenthal, the top pitcher of the Redmen staff.

But the game that was supposed to be timed with a stopwatch ended up being timed with an hourglass. The pitcher's duel lasted only one inning, as Shea and the defense let Baylock down.

In the bottom of the second inning, St. John's scored a run as cleanup hitter Henry Siemers singled, was sacrificed to second, went to third on a wild pitch, and scored on a single by Doug Manfedonia. By the end of the contest, Manfedonia had knocked in two more runs.

In the third inning Sunday afternoon at this storied Catholic university, all hell broke loose.

As dark clouds and light drizzle replaced the sun for the afternoon, St. John's (23-14 overall, 9-5 in the Big East) broke the game open with eight runs for a 9-0 lead. And before the inning was over, Shea had also been replaced.

Poor play by his third baseman helped to bring on Shea's downfall. Peter Zippel made an error to allow Jerry Kelly to reach first at the start of the big inning. After a strike out, Kelly stole second and went to third on a single by Frank Caccavale, who took second on a bad throw by leftfielder Mike Pingree.

Tony Bonura singled home Kelly, and Tony Pellegrino made the score 3-0 when Zippel bobbled his slow roller to third.

At that point, Shea lost his cool. "Once those errors happened I lost my concentration," Shea said. "I tried to strike out people instead of just trying to get them out."

Siemers and Dennis Sutton had RBI singles, and Bob Bellini hit a sacrifice fly to increase the Redmen lead to 6-0. Then Manfedonia smashed a 400-foot RBI double to right center to drive in another run, prompting Baylock to replace Shea with Scott Ryan.

Kelly drove in another run with double just inside the left field line, and Scott DeMarrias scored the final run of the inning, driving home Kelly with an RBI single past third base.

The guys at Grand Central Station with a paper bag and bottle in their hand may be next on line for UConn's third base job. Scott Cormier made three errors there Thursday to help Fairfield beat UConn, 5-4, and Zippel had a bad inning after playing well there Saturday. "When you kick the ball around, it takes the fun out of the game," Baylock said.

Shea's performance also made Baylock unhappy. "I'm really concerned about him. That's his fourth bad outing in a row," Baylock said. "He didn't start out that badly and then he gave up all those hits. When the ball gets kicked around like that it hurts your confidence."

Rosenthal, though, had only one minor lapse as he pitched a complete game to raise his record to 5-1. The Huskies loaded the bases with no one out and two runs of UConn's three runs in the fourth scored when Rosenthal made a poor throw home on an attempted force play.

Rosenthal settled down after that, and get out the last 12 UConn batters he faced for the complete-game victory. He struck out the last four Husky batters and had a total of eight for the day.

UConn got a strong pitching performance of its own Saturday when Joe Simonoko (2-3) had a three-hitter to give UConn the opening game victory. St. John's got its only run of the 5-1 contest in the second inning, but Zippel gave the Huskies the lead for good on a two-run triple in the fourth inning.

The Huskies scored another run in the inning on a passed ball, and RBI singles in the fifth inning by Dave Lanese and H.A. Butterworth brought home the other Husky runs.

St. John's gained a split of the doubleheader with a rare three-homer inning in its spacious field. Though the field measures 400 feet down the left field line, 390 to straight away center, and 370 down the right field line, the Redmen were able to get three homers in the second inning against Mark Thalmann.

Thalmann had won his last two outings with complete game shutouts, but he was a different pitcher Saturday. Sutton led off the second with a homer to right field, and after a single by Siemers, Kelly had a two-run home run. Lou Blanco finished the power surge with a homer to center field. Frank Diaz went the distance for his first win of the season.

Russo was happy with the overall results of the weekend. "We hit the ball very well," he said. "Its strange that we hit their two top pitchers the best and lost to the guy we felt we could beat. But I'm pleased with the way the weekend went."

Baylock was also pleased with the way the weekend was going until the Redmen kicked sand in his face.

HUSKY NOTES: Dave Ford broke the total bases record of the school with four hits Saturday. Jim Considine had the previous record with 232...Ford is hitting .522 in the Big East...The Huskies travel to UMass for a 3 p.m. game Tuesday.

Softball team slaps down Temple with heady play

PHILADELPHIA, PA—Junior shortstop Jodi Dinga collected three RBI and both game-winning hits while teammates Lynn Wisniewski and Robin Beauregard drove in two runs apiece to lead No. 19 nationally-ranked UConn to a 3-0, 4-1 doubleheader sweep over Temple University in college softball action Sunday afternoon.

In the opener, Dinga broke a 0-0 scoreless deadlock in the fifth inning with a one-out, sacrifice fly to deep right field to score pitcher Mary Linhares, who had doubled to begin the inning.

Dinga, the Huskies' All-New England shortstop, went 3-for-4 at the plate in the nightcap, including connecting for the game-winning double. In the second inning, after freshman second baseman Robin Beauregard tallied and RBI single to tie the score at 1-1, Dinga doubled home Lauren Vitelli and Beauregard with the go-ahead runs as UConn took a 3-1 lead. Beauregard closed out the Husky scoring in the fourth inning, stroking an RBI double to centerfield to score Vitelli, who had singled.

Connecticut received complete game victories from junior righthander Mary Linhares (8-1) in the opener and from sophomore righthander Denise Hannon (13-2) in the nightcap. In the first game, Linhares gained her eighth shutout win of the season. She allowed just two singles and struck out two while walking none to lower her earned run average to 0.21.

With the doubleheader loss, Temple falls to 23-13.

Owner cannot Berra losing, rehires Martin

CHICAGO (AP)—Yogi Berra was fired as manager of the New York Yankees on Sunday and was replaced by Billy Martin, who will take over the team for the fourth time in his managing career.

"The action was taken by the Yankees and we felt it was in the best interests of the club," Yankees principal owner George Steinbrenner said in a statement. The dismissal was announced after the Yankees lost 4-3 to the Chicago White Sox, the club's third straight loss and 10th in 16 games this season.

Yankees General Manager Clyde King read Steinbrenner's statement. King added, on his own, that Steinbrenner "would rather fire 25 players than to fire Yogi, but we all know that would be impossible."

There had been talk last season that Berra would be fired as the Yankees fell far behind the eventual World Series champion Detroit Tigers.

But last Oct. 25, Steinbrenner ended that speculation when he announced Berra would return in 1985.

"The Yankees will not be making any changes for 1985. Yogi Berra's contract will be honored," Steinbrenner said.

"I just can't understand all these teams changing managers the way they do. The lack of stability is alarming...it's startling to me how many teams changed managers this year...it's getting so that you can't even make news anymore when you make a change," Steinbrenner said.

Rumors of Berra's firing began circulating early last week, when the Yankees lost games Tuesday night and
